• The first sod was turned for the new Y.M.-Y.W.H.A. building on St. Catherine Road, near Westbury Avenue. The centre, when completed, will not only be the first co-education institution of its kind in North America, but it will also be the largest Y.M. and Y.W.H.A. in the world. Presided over by J. H. Blumenstein, president of the Y.M.H.A., and by Mrs. V. Michaels, president of the Y.W.H.A., the meeting heard words of welcome on behalf of the municipal administration by Councillor Charles Pare. The actual turning of the sod was done by Mrs. Samuel Bronfman, O.B.E., honorary president of the Y.W.H.A., and Sol. Kellert, senior honorary president of the Y.M.H.A. They were assisted by Moe Lewitt, chairman of the building committee; and Zave Levinson, M.B.E., immediate past president of the "Y". Rabbi Wilfred Shuchat, of Shaar Hashomayim Congregation, pronounced the benediction; and Cantor N. Mendelsohn, of the same congregation, intoned a psalm. Speaking on behalf of the Canadian Jewish Congress, Samuel Bronfman said, "The proposed building will fill a long-felt need and its construction must be hailed not only by Canadian Jews, but by all citizens of the Dominion because it shows an appreciation of the country's most important asset—youth." Mr. Blumenstein recalled the dedication some 20 years ago of the Sir Mortimer B. Davis Memorial Building on Mount Royal Avenue West. J. W. Beaton, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., representing the president, Gerald W. Birks, who was absent owing to illness, congratulated the board of directors of the Y.M. and Y.W.H.A. for their "vision and courage in taking this tremendous step forward" and added, that "it takes on a special significance in days like these when rival ideologies compete for the ideals and even loyalty of youth." Other speakers were: S. L. Mendelsohn, K.C., an honorary president of the Y.M.H.A.; Sartor Desnoyers, president of the Palestre Nationale; Mrs. R. C. Holden, president of the Y.W.C.A.; Maurice Hartt, K.C., Member of Parliament for Montreal-Cartier; H. E. Was Pioneer In Child Study

Mrs. Helen Goldmark Adler of 3902 Spuyten Duyvil Parkway, widow of Dr. Felix Adler, founder of the Ethical Culture Society, died in the home of a daughter, Mrs. Horace Friess of 460 Riverside Drive, New York, after a long illness. She was 89 years old.

She was the eldest daughter of Joseph and Regina Goldmark. Her father, a young physician in Vienna, fought there in the revolution of 1848, and afterward migrated to the U.S., where he became a manufacturing chemist and at. inventor.

The family settled in Brooklyn and Mrs. Adler attended the Brooklyn Heights Seminary and passed entrance examinations for Harvard, although then there was no provision for the attendance of women.

In 1880 she was married to Dr. Adler and from the first joined in her husband's pioneering social, educational and religious work. She helped him start an early visiting nurses' service for the poor, employing three nurses who worked in connection with the DeMilt Dispensary on the West Side.

She also helped him establish a free kindergarten and the Workingmen's School, which became the Ethical Culture School. When her family grew, Mrs. Adler took up child study with other mothers, and laid a foundation for the present Child Study Association of America.

Her book, "An Outline for Child Study, Intelligently Directed Observations for Mothers," was one of the first manuals in the field. When she was 60 her talents for arts and crafts led her to a particular interest in the Arts High School of the Ethical Culture School at Fieldston. She also took a prominent part in the Women's Conference of the Ethical Culture Society.

Mrs. Adler accompanied her husband on many travels in America and abroad, as in 1908 when he was Roosevelt Professor in Berlin and in 1923 when he was Hibbert lecturer at Oxford. She was a sister-in-law of the late Justice Louis D. Brandeis of the Supreme Court.

Besides her daughter, she leaves two sons, Waldo, of Chestnut Hill, Pa.; and Laurence, of New York; two other daughters, the Misses Eleanor H. and Margaret Adler, of New York; and two sisters, the Misses Pauline and Josephine Goldmark, of Hartsdale, N.Y.

The Palestine Room in the Jewish Teachers' Seminary, 154 East 70th Street, New York, was established by the Pioneer Women, the women's labor Zionist Organization of America, at an initial cost of $10,000. The room contains books and periodicals on Palestine, past and present, and paintings by contemporary Palestinian artists. A mural, extending around one wall, is by Eliezer Halveni, of Ramat Yohanan, and portrays the spring season in Palestine. The 800 volumes in the library, written in Hebrew and English, were mostly published in Palestine.

OPEN BLOOD BANK FOR PALESTINE

A blood donor service to aid the wounded in Palestine was opened in New York in 326 East Thirty-ninth Street.

The sponsor was American Red Mogen Dovid for Palestine, Inc., of 220 Fifth Avenue, an agency formed to support Palestine's "Red Star of David." The latter was said to provide medical aid without regard to race or creed.

Zalaman J. Friedman, executive director of the American group, announced that a goal of 100,000 donors had been set. He said additional centers might be established soon in Philadelphia and Boston.

Dr. Harris J. Levine, vice president and medical consultant to the American group, is chairman of the blood bank project. He said 3,000 units of dry blood plasma had been sent by ship and plane in the last few weeks. This supply, amounting to 6,000 donations, was bought from a commercial service.

Charts Social Work Help To DP

The International Refugee Organization may be able to complete its work in two or three years if governments continue to take a "fair share" of displaced persons as immigrants, Miss Martha H. Biehle, operations officer of the United States Office of the world group, predicted at Atlantic City, N.J.

She announced that there still were 1,500,000 displaced persons and refugees, chiefly in Germany, Austria and Italy, as she addressed a joint general session of the seventy-fifth anniversary meetings of the National Conference of Social Work and the Fourth International Conference of Social Work. The conferences were attended by 8,000 social workers from the U.S. and 200 foreign delegates.

Most of the displaced persons left have been reluctant to return to their countries because of economic and political conditions, she said.

"Many definitely disagree with and fear the political regimes now in control of their countries," she declared.

The 1,500,000 displaced persons are all that are left of 10,000,000 found in the western zones of Germany and Austria at the close of the war, she said.

There are 150,000 family units among the displaced persons now in camps and assembly centers, she reported, uring that "every effort be made to provide for their migration as family units."

Miss Biehle appealed to social workers all over the world to help the displaced persons to become part of the communities in which they settled by performing such functions as helping them find a place to live, getting medical attention in case of accident, and locating schools for the children and language classes for the adults.

"No intergovernmental agency can possibly provide adequately the direct personal touch which is so essential to the well-being of the people it wishes to resettle," she said. "Private and national social welfare agencies must carry a large portion of this work."

MAGNES, FOR THIRTY YEARS CHAMPION OF BI-NATIONAL STATE

By Julian Louis Meltzer, Of Jerusalem, In The New York Times

The one constant factor in Palestine's longstanding perplexities is that its Jewish and Arab populations must continue to live together, no matter what ultimate political solution is hammered out. Whatever new constitution is framed, there will still be two peoples domiciled alongside each other in a land whose very smallness makes cooperative existence necessary and indeed inescapable in the long run.

Dr. Judah Leon Magnes, former rabbi of the largest Jewish congregation in America and head of Hebrew University in Jerusalem since its formation in 1924, has over the past thirty years maintained in speeches and writings that the sole equitable solution of the conflict between the two exclusive nationalisms is the formation of a bi-national state. This means ultimately an independent Palestinian state with two nationalities on an equal footing, politically and numerically.

The Zionists assert that Dr. Magnes' proposals are fair and give adequate place to unrestricted Jewish immigration, but they take issue with his views because they want a Jewish nationalist state into which Jews from all parts of the world could enter at any time as a right, and could ultimately become the numerical majority, ruling under a democratic constitution.

The Arabs feel that Dr. Magnes' plea for political parity, irrespective of numerical considerations, is tantamount to asking them to yield their present superior advantage of numbers. They fear that concessions given now will result eventually in their being swamped and dominated by a Jewish majority and in the stultification of their political growth toward national independence.

Dr. Magnes, however, declares that Palestine as a land of three monotheistic religions is no place for an exclusively nationalist state. He is a fervent opponent of any kind of chauvinism.

Zionist and Arab leaders and the rank and file assert that he talks without benefit of suffrage and holds no elected position. The Ihud (Union) Association of Palestine, which is under Dr. Magnes' leadership, agrees that he is not an elected politician in the professional sense, but claims that his essential disinterestedness in party dogmas and alignments places his proposals for Arab-Jewish cooperation wholly above vested political interests.

The Ihud Association came into being in 1942 as a successor to the B'rith Shalom (Alliance of Peace) which Dr. Magnes together with some friends founded in 1930 after the 1929 civil disturbances. B'rith Shalom and Ihud took as their principal plank a firm belief in the feasibility and practicability of Arab-Jewish Cooperation in Palestine.

Dr. Magnes became the central figure of the Ihud group. It is not a political party but includes a number of outstanding members from different parties and, though its membership is small, its ideas have penetrated various Arab circles.

There is no doubt that Judah Leon Magnes has been a stormy petrel throughout his active life. But he has always been courageous and it is because he has expressed his views with such clarity and force that he has provoked so much discussion.

I was riding in a taxicab along a tree-lined Jerusalem avenue when I saw a tall, familiar figure of athletic build striding briskly along the windswept sidewalk with an easy, almost boyish gait. The skies were leaden and the other pedestrians hugged shelter, but he seemed to revel in the wet weather.

"Taxi, sir?" I called through the window, asking the driver to draw alongside the curb.

Standing there without an umbrella, his snap-brim Stetson worn jauntily, he declined my invitation smilingly. "Why, no, thanks. I like walking in the rain in Palestine. It reminds me of my youth in California."

It is hard to realize that this six-foot, rangy Californian, whom many regard as being among the greatest Jews of the present century, is 70 years old. Dr. Magnes is beginning to get gray-haired, but he still looks as if he were in his fifties. He was once a great baseball player and fond of tennis, which he played until he was 56. His only exercise nowadays is walking. "I like to walk night-times, but that seems inadvisable now, not only because of the political violence," he said whimsically, "but also because of the police and military operations."

Dr. Magnes was born in San Francisco and educated in the public schools of Oakland, the University of Cincinnati, Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, and the University of Heidelberg in Germany, where he received his doctor's degree. He taught at Hebrew Union College for two years and from 1905 to 1908 was secretary of the Federation of American Zionists, now called the Zionist Organization of America. In this office he succeeded the late Jacob De Haas, who was the first secretary of the organization.

From 1906 to 1910 Dr. Magnes was rabbi at Temple Emanu-El in New York. In 1907 he organized the Jewish Community of New York, of which he was the first and only chairman, holding the position until 1922. By the time America was entering the First World War, this community already had become the largest Jewish organization in the world and gave promise of being a great constructive force in American Judaism. But when the United States declared war in April, 1917, Dr. Magnes gave vigorous public expression to his pacifism and it was owing to this that the New York community organization began to decline, both in numbers and in influence. With his departure in 1922 to settle in Palestine, the organization almost ceased to exist.

"Thus, what I built with my own hands I unhappily destroyed," he declares sadly today.

In 1939, however, his advocacy of war against Hitler was voiced in a widely quoted address at Hebrew University, which republished it recently in a small volume entitled, "In the Perplexity of the Times."

The Hebrew University carries on both academic work and scientific research. Many of its 700 alumni and seventy doctors of philosophy who have received degrees since the first class was graduated are now teachers and researchers, either in Palestine or abroad.

The University opens its doors to Arabs, but only three Moslems are now enrolled. The political situation makes it difficult for Arabs to consider studying at a Jewish institution. Moreover, according to Dr. Magnes, few young Arabs attain secondary school educations which meet university standards. But inquiries have been received from many Arabs who wish to enter the Medical School, which is to open two years hence.

At 70 Dr. Magnes has a full day's schedule. He rises at 6 o'clock in the morning and is occupied until 10 at night. As president of Hebrew University, he is particularly interested in the university's Institute of Jewish Studies and its School of Oriental Studies; in the Hebrew University Press Association for the creation of which he was mainly responsible in 1926, and in the Medical School, the joint creation of Hebrew University and Hadassah, the women's Zionist organization of America. In this connection he is chairman of the Hadassah Council in Palestine. He also is chairman of the Middle East Advisory Committee of the American-Jewish Joint Distribution Committee.

"I have been trying for years to withdraw from various activities," said Dr. Magnes, "and I feel that the time has come when I should cease to be a Chairman with a capital C, although perhaps I may remain as chairman of some committees with a small c."

As I sat talking with him in the study of his home the other day, there were three books lying on his desk. He said he was reading all three at the same time. They were a volume by an Oxford don, T. D. Weldon, "States and Morals"; a book by an Arab publicist, Edward Atiyah, "An Arab Tells His Story," and Solomon Schechter's "Some Aspects of Rabbinic Theology," which he is re-reading carefully because he says he would like the Hebrew University Press Association to translate and publish it in Hebrew. He is similarly interested in having the best books written by the Mount Scopus scholars translated and published in English.

What has always impressed me about Dr. Magnes in our long acquaintance has been his humanness and his way of shunning the limelight. His humor is a synthesis of both qualities and often runs to a delight in incongruous situations, to which he is very much alive.

One memory I cherish is of seeing Dr. Magnes many years ago walking down a main thoroughfare of Jerusalem on a summer's day in the company of one of his three sons. Father and son carried ice cream cones, which they were gravely licking. As a postscript, he chuckles today: "I still like ice cream."

Dr. Magnes is thinking a great deal these days, he tells me, about the problems explicit in the theme, "The Uniqueness of Israel," that is, combination in Judaism of the highest universalist principles and the religious nationalism of the Jewish people.

"It is, I think, one of the most essential tasks of Jewish scholarship today to clarify this paradox," he said. "I am convinced that such a clarification would give Judaism a practical program, both in its relation to the outside world and to the distraught Jewish people itself."

Dr. Magnes' views on the feasibility of establishing a unified bi-national Palestine state have deeply impressed the Arab intelligentsia — among the Arab peasantry there is real daily cooperation with their Jewish neighbors — and it is true that, of the Jews living in Palestine, Dr. Magnes probably is among the few whom Arabs of all classes feel to be completely and dispassionately sincere about the concept of Semitic racial cooperation. If there is any misgiving among thinking Arabs, it is that Dr. Magnes' views are not popular among his own people and that he has little following.

"My unconquerable conviction that the Jews and Arabs must and can live together," said Dr. Magnes, "stems from two elements of my training: first, the study of the Hebrew prophets and the Bible since my youth; second, my education as a liberal and my early life in what was at that time more or less an American frontier State—California."

Dr. Magnes and his friends feel that a partition of Palestine, with the creation of separate Arab and Jewish states, will keep both peoples permanently apart "on either side of two unsatisfactory boundaries" and will set up extremist irredentas, which in turn will lead to armed conflict between the two races. Moreover, they assert that the partitions issue may provoke internecine strife among the Jews of Palestine themselves.

Their proposal called for an undivided bi-national Palestine in which Jews and Arabs would live and work in unison, having an equal share in the development, progress and administration of the Holy Land.

Paul Soles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Soles, 65 Strathearn Road, Toronto, was presented with the Youth Leadership Award for work in connection with the Junior Congregation of Goel Tzedec Synagogue, at the closing dinner of the Men's Club.

Arthur S. Bruckman, of New York, president of the National Federation of Jewish Men's Clubs, spoke in Toronto at the closing dinner of Goel Tzedec Synagogue Men's Club, on "The Men's Club, Builder For Jewish Survival", and presented a charter to the club. His photograph was sent to the Review too late for insertion in last week's issue.

Sweden Admits 1,000 Workers Yearly

Anti-Semitism will be outlawed in Sweden this year, Dr. Wilhelm Michaeli, director of the HIAS (Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society) office in Stockholm, reported on his arrival in the United States for conferences on immigration matters. Dr. Michaeli, who was accompanied by David Kopniewsky, Managing Director of the Stockholm Jewish Community, said that although Swedish police have traced the editor of anti-Semitic pamphlets which were sent from Stockholm to the United States, they apparently have not established the financial source of support for these activities. Mr. Kopniewsky said the police asked the cooperation of the Jewish community in an effort to ascertain who was behind the anti-Semitic editor.

Aside from this development, there have been few signs of anti-Semitism in Sweden, Dr. Michaeli said. The Swedish government has been permitting approximately 1,000 Jewish craftsmen to enter the country annually from other European nations. Sweden has also been a transmigration country for European emigrants. There are presently about 18,000 Jews in Sweden as compared with 7,000 in 1933.

During 1947, a total of 1,340 Jews emigrated from Sweden to countries outside of Europe. Of these, HIAS assisted 1,102, and other agencies helped 238. Dr. Michaeli said that HIAS representations have been made to the Swedish government for the admission of a larger number of D.P.'s to Sweden during 1948.

Welfare Worker Headed War Program

Benjamin Rabinowitz, of New York, director of the Jewish Center division of the National Jewish Welfare Board, died in the Jewish General Hospital, Montreal, after a brief illness. His age was 52. He had gone to Montreal on business.

Mr. Rabinowitz, whose office was at 145 East Thirty-second Street, New York, resided at 140 Clarkson Avenue, Brooklyn. The division he headed is the coordinating agency of 314 Jewish Community Centers, Young Men's Hebrew Associations and Young Women's Hebrew Associations in the United States and Canada.

Born in Rochester, N.Y., he was the son of the late Rabbi Samuel Rabinowitz. He was graduated from City College in 1915 and received an M.A. degree from Columbia University in 1916. After a year teaching high school, Mr. Rabinowitz served the National Jewish Welfare Board as programs director at Camp Lee, Va., and later at Camp Upton, L.I.

When the NJWB began its assignment in the recent war as a member of the United Service Organizations, Mr. Rabinowitz became head of the Jewish group's Army and Navy division. He helped to set up its wartime program which was world-wide in operation and headed a staff of more than 40,000 workers organized in more than 600 Army and Navy committees. He went to Hawaii twice as head of the division. At the war's end he was made director of the Jewish Center division.

Mr. Rabinowitz was the author of standard manuals on organization and administration of a Jewish Center and the responsibilities of Center boards of directors. Recently the American Jewish Historical Society published his history of the Y.M.H.A. movement from 1854 to 1913.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Sally Rabinowitz; his mother, Mrs. Mary Rabinowitz; a son, Myron Rabinowitz, and two sisters, Mrs. Henrietta Toubin and Mrs. Sophie Goldfarb, all of Brooklyn.

Distillers' Officer Backed Shows

Daniel K. Weiskopf, seventy-four, a director and former vice-president of National Distillers Products Corporation of New York, died at his home at Miami Beach, Florida. A former resident of New York, Mr. Weiskopf moved to Miami Beach after his retirement in 1936. Born in Cincinnati, Mr. Weiskopf was said to have entered the beverage business at the age of thirteen, selling lemonade from a sidewalk stand. He was a whisky broker in his father's business in Cincinnati before moving to New York more than twenty-five years ago.

For some time, he was associated with the Distillers Securities Corporation, and its successor, the United States Food Products Corporation, which later was absorbed by National Distillers. Mr. Weiskopf joined the latter organization, and was made a director in 1936. He was vice-president from 1933 until his retirement.

Following repeal of the prohibition law Mr. Weiskopf fought in Washington against false labeling of whisky and distilled products. "Deceptive labeling and fraudulent advertising should be banned as an essential preliminary step for the protection of the consuming production," Mr. Weiskopf held at that time.

Mr. Weiskopf was well known to Broadway in the thirties as a financial backer of stage shows. He was associated with Arch Selwyn in his first venture, "Charlot Revue," and also backed such productions as "Spring Cleaning" and "Of Thee I Sing." Mr. Weiskopf was an ardent racing fan and maintained a stable of racing horses.

Surviving are two sons, James and Robert Weiskopf, and a daughter, Mrs. Robert H. Reid. His wife, Mrs. Josephine B. Weiskopf, died in 1936.

Group Recruits Flyers In N.Y.

Veterans of the United States Army Air Forces are being recruited in New York for possible combat flying in Palestine, according to the New York Times. They are being asked whether they would train combat crews in the United States.

The recruiting is conducted by an organization that calls itself the Anglo-Palestine Aviation Society. Information requested on its applications is similar to that asked for by regular commercial airlines. The main difference, it was learned, is that the Anglo-Palestine organization's forms ask whether applicants would serve without pay.

However, when the applicants are interviewed by a veteran combat pilot, who served in the Twelfth Air Force during World War II, they are asked to state their combat experience and whether they would be willing to fly combat missions in Palestine.

One applicant described the procedure as follows:

The airmen are reached by form letters signed with the name Eric Spector. They do not encounter the signer. A postoffice box in Grand Central Station is used for a return address.

A short time after he answered this letter the applicant who gave this information, a navigator with 250 hours of combat flying, received a telephone call from a woman who identified herself as "Mrs. Levine." He was told to report for an interview in a fourth floor office at 7 East Fifteenth Street.

On reporting, he met two other navigators with whom he had served during the war. One was there for his second interview. Other men present, applying for service with the organization were specialists in communications and meteorology, according to the informant.

This person described the pilot who conducted the interviews as a man "who knew what he was doing."

No information was given to applicants on how the organization plans to get them to Palestine. They were not told whether their services would be needed. "We'll let you know if we need you," the men were told.

A representative of the George Washington Legion, which is volunteering to serve as a United Nations police force in Palestine, identified Eric Spector as a veteran of the United States Army Air Forces.

The spokesman said he knew Mr. Spector well enough to be sure that he was operating a legitimate organization. He added that he thought that if the Anglo-Palestine Aviation Society attempted to send men to Palestine it would follow the same plan as the Washington Legion.

The Legion, he said, would rather police Palestine itself than have regular United States Army troops sent to the Holy Land. In this way, the spokesman declared, it would be possible to avoid the bad feeling that would result if American soldiers were killed in the Jewish-Arab conflict.

A spokesman for the Jewish Agency for Palestine said that the Anglo-Palestine Aviation Society was affiliated with the Political Action Committee for Palestine, which he described as a "publicity grabbing" organization. The Political Action Committee is a non-sectarian organization, headed by former Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin. It takes an extremely militant stand on the Palestine situation.

Get Bnai Brith Award

Charles E. Wilson, president of the General Electric Company, received one of the five 1948 "America's Democratic Legacy" awards of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith for "courageous leadership" as chairman of the President's Committee on Civil Rights.

In his office in New York, Mr. Wilson accepted the silver medallion from Supreme Court Justice Meier Steinbrink, national chairman of the league. Also present was Benjamin R. Epstein, the organization's national director.

The report of the President's committee was praised in the citation as "a bold landmark in our maturing understanding of the conditions of democracy."

"It cites shameful instances of injustice to certain Americans," the citation added, "and offers practical steps to remedy them, demonstrating to the rest of the world America's capacity for unflinching self-criticism and for self-improvement through democratic processes."

The four other award recipients are Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Barney Balaban, Darryl Zanuck, and Dore Schary.

CANCELS CONCERTS IN PALESTINE

Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, cancelled her spring concert tour in Palestine and appealed to the United States to stop the Holy Land war by making "some great gesture."

Miss Tourel, who was under contract with the Palestine Philharmonic Orchestra to give twelve recitals in three Holy Land cities, announced her action in New York in an open letter to Warren R. Austin, permanent American delegate to the United Nations.

Scheduled to give her first concert in Tel Aviv on May 16, the day after expected termination of the British mandate, Miss Tourel wrote Mr. Austin that she was cancelling her tour "not because I am afraid" . . . but because "the people of Palestine will have more pressing things to do than . . . listen to music."

Miss Tourel called on Mr. Austin, "as the honored representative of the most powerful nation in the world," to stop the Arab-Jewish warfare" . . . by some courageous move which could fire the minds and imaginations of everyone else."

● HOLY BLOSSOM TEMPLE, Rabbi Abraham L. Feinberg: About 1,000 attended the Festival of Jewish Music held in connection with the tenth anniversary celebration of the Temple. It was a selection of art music by modern Jewish composers and not one of folk music, except as the Jewish folk melodies formed the inspiration for some of the composers' works. Making its concert debut was the Canadian Little Symphony with Harold Sumberg as conductor. While it ordinarily includes wind, brass and percussion, it was revised to conform with the original orchestrations of the works performed, and string ensemble work was dominant. Evelyn Pasen, mezzo-soprano; Gordon Day, flautist; and Leo Barkin, pianist, were the soloists. The composers represented were: Harvey Gaul, John Weinzweig, Darius Milhaud, J. Schertok, Joel Engel, L. Zeitlin, Joseph Achron, Samuel Alman, Ernest Bloch, Lazare Saminsky, Mordecai Sandberg, Israel Brandmann, a list drawn from musicians of several countries, with Weinzweig as the Canadian. Termed by Rabbi Feinberg "as much a prayer as any rabbi could say," the festival consisted largely of transcriptions of folk and sacred music. Temple Library has the scores of the unpublished Jewish compositions produced at the festival for the first time in Canada. They are available to any Jewish organization which requests them. Rabbi Feinberg hopes that other congregations and Jewish educational institutions may know the cultural value of such a project, and perhaps adopt it as an experimental venture in the Jewish musical field. CONTRIBUTE REGULARLY THROUGH THE BLUE-WHITE BOX

The Blue-White box of the Jewish National Fund has been a symbol of Zionist hopes and dreams for nearly fifty years and has been instrumental in redeeming many thousands of dunams of land in Eretz Israel.

It is our duty in this historic period of Jewish history, to give the J.N.F. box a place of honour in our homes. Coins should be placed in the Blue box on the occasion of the lighting of the Sabbath and Holiday candles, social evenings, family gatherings, birthdays and other "simchas."

Volunteer workers representing the Jewish National Fund will call to clear the Blue-White boxes during the next few weeks.

So Little Time

The days intervening between Passover and Shavuoth are designated as days of "sephira." In accordance with the biblical injunction we count these days, commencing with the second night of Passover until we reach the Feast of Weeks. "And ye shall count unto you from tomorrow after the day of rest, from that day that ye brought the sheaf offering of the waving; seven weeks shall there be complete; even unto the morrow after the seventh week shall ye number fifty days." (Leviticus 23:15)

The counting of days is a beautiful way of teaching us the value of time. What is time? Many are the definitions. Thus one thinker speaks of time "as the stuff life is made of"; another defines time "as a sandpile in which we run our fingers in"; and still another speaks of time "as the soul of the world." Benjamin Franklin said, "time is money." However we choose to define time, of one thing we are all certain, that the day is short. As human beings we measure events by time and we realize that time is, indeed, short!

Youth dislikes the phrase "time is short." For youth is dedicated to the future and is enchanted by the view of distance. It hardly thinks in terms of the past. Yet the first twenty years in a person's life are the longest he will ever know. The golden years of youth speedily pass on before they are even well begun. How important, therefore, it is that youth make the years count for the finer things in life and learn to make the best possible use of time. Well has the religious sage admonished, "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth."

Alas, living in the kind of a world we find ourselves, in which materialism dominates, youth is so often driven to neglect idealism and the spiritual values of life. Yet without these and the cultivation of these in the days of youth, we move into a life of maturity which has no poetry and no song, with the result that life may become an animal existence clothed in human garb. Very early must youth learn to be jealous of time. History records how the noble sons of men have ever guarded precious time and in early youth thus made unique contributions to human welfare.

Certainly when we reach middle age we soon discover how time is fleeting. And yet it is most important in this period of life to be of good courage and cheer despite the disappointments and the loss of enthusiasm which we all experience. For what human being is there who has lived forty years and has not made mistakes? All the more is it vital that in this period of life we take on renewed strength and build for certainty and move forward in enrichment of our soul life.

"Cast me not aside in the time of my old age," cries the Psalmist. What a human cry and how well we understand it. For old age often means poverty and sickness and feebleness and helplessness. It is therefore but natural that men fear old age. However, old age can be a joyous experience if we are given the chance to grow old graciously. The time of old age should be a period for meditation and reflection upon life. We know of such lovely humans who possess the peace of God and are able to make of old age a blessing for themselves and for those in whose midst they dwell.

How many of us count our days in terms of our Jewishness? Here is our precious heritage, Judaism! How well do we daily give of our personal service to the cause of our religion upon which hinges the very salvation of humanity? Multitudes among us spend their days in naught and in the meaningless and in the mere getting and spending. Few, indeed, there are among us who in these days meditate over Torah. Few, indeed, there are among us who engage in the personal service of visiting the sick, the lonely, and the broken hearted.

What shall we say about the art of prayer and worship which seems to have faded out to such a large degree among us moderns? Yet we know there can be no great religion without counting days in terms of meditation and in terms of spiritual culture. We have so little time for these abiding values of life. How important it is that we use time wisely and that we waste not our days.

Somehow the trouble with all of us is that we seem to know only one kind of arithmetic and that is the counting of money. We fail in the art of counting time. "So little time" but enough in which to make life noble, livable and lovable if we but live courageously and walk during our short pilgrimage on earth in the ways of God, the Eternal and the Timeless One.

Recently, we were struck by a painting which indicated a door with crepe hanging on it on the outside. A hand was reaching out for the knob of the door. The artist indicated the meaning of this painting by the following description: "That which I should have done I did not do." The friend we neglected to visit in time of sickness by postponing the visit, in the meantime passes on to the great beyond. What about the letter we have failed to write to a dear one who is waiting for word of cheer from us but that word of cheer never came? How negligent we all are with time and how truly we fail to budget this most precious possession of life.

"We live in deeds, not years, in thoughts, not breaths,
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count life by heart throbs.
He lives most
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, and acts the best."

immigration—a minimum of 5,000 persons a month."

He said the terms should also permit land purchase by Jews, free passage throughout the country of all persons engaged in peaceful pursuits and the exclusion of all armed forces from neighboring Arab nations.

Mr. Lehman, who said he had been invited by the President to discuss the Palestine crisis, reported that Mr. Truman was "deeply interested and concerned over the situation."

The former Governor, who is a delegate-at-large to the Democratic national convention, said that politics did not come up in his talk with the President. When White House reporters asked him if he would vote for Mr. Truman's nomination, he replied:

"I'm just a delegate." He repeated this answer when a reporter asked if he was "a Truman delegate."

painted the displaced persons as a wayward elements. "The record shows that displaced persons are more law-abiding than the population among which they live," Mr. Tuck said.

On the credit side, Mr. Tuck said he confidently expected early ratification of the International Refugee Organization's constitution by Brazil, Denmark or Venezuela. The addition of any of these countries would give a permanent status to the organization. He cited new agreements for large-scale resettlement with Brazil and Canada, but he stressed the difficulty of getting transportation. This is so serious that Mr. Tuck said a financial saving was anticipated from transporting displaced persons by air to certain countries.

In all, the organization will have moved about 50,000 fewer displaced persons than planned by July 1, 1948, according to the New York Times.

scribed in Hebrew letters across the top of the church tablet on the front of the building.

Jews were among those who contributed funds to repair the church when it was damaged by Hessian soldiers during the Revolutionary War. The Second Presbyterian Church housed the Temple Israel Congregation in 1922 and since 1938 "has been a home to the members of Brith Sholom," the rabbi said.

"I am glad to invest in this cause," Dr. Schulman said, "and I know our friends will join in giving practical encouragement to save this historic sanctuary from passing from American life."

The church property includes the present site and the seventeen-story apartment building on it in which the church, day school and all the parish activities are incorporated.

British Columbia Acts Against Anti-Semitism

The Toronto Star says:

A few weeks before the Conservative majority in the Ontario legislature defeated a C.C.F. bill to outlaw discrimination, the attorney-general of British Columbia took legal action against "hate peddlers" in that province. The Hon. Gordon Wismer decided personally to prosecute a young Australian, Thomas Potts Graham, who was charged with publishing and distributing anti-Semitism pamphlets.

A jury of citizens in British Columbia reached a verdict in just eight minutes. It found Graham guilty of stirring up racial hatred and ill-will. The judge ordered him deported after he had served three months in prison. The court decided against a longer prison term so as to save the public's money.

There is significance in the fact that the attorney-general of the province decided to prosecute the case. It reflects the growth of public opinion in British Columbia against racial intolerance. Mr. Wismer declared:

"Anti-Semitism in Canada must be nipped in the bud if this country is to avoid repetitions of the Nazi pogroms. If it is all right for Graham to disseminate this literature of ill-will and hatred, then it is all right for what happened in Dachau to happen here. We want to make it clear that we are not going to allow anything of this kind to be started against any minority in this country."

The British press has for almost two years carried warnings of the rise of a new, international Fascist movement, with headquarters in London, instead of in Berlin. Reynolds News reported in July, 1947, the discovery of a plan "to set up an anti-Jewish international on the lines of the pre-war Nazi Welt-Dienst (World Service)."

Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the British Union of Fascists, has revived in Britain the international information service formerly conducted by the Nazis in Germany. He is a wealthy man and has obtained support from other wealthy persons for the work. Its chief function is to spread propaganda against Jews, Negroes, and other minority groups and against the Soviet Union.

Mosley's movement is reported to have made considerable headway in many countries; in Canada to a limited degree. In South Africa, it is being furthered by Oswald Pirow, who during the war was openly pro-Nazi and actively opposed the Allied war effort. The British publication "On Guard" stated that "members of Canadian Brown Shirts" are linked both with U.S. Organizations and with the British, and named several Canadians, Adrien Arcand of Quebec among others, as important links.

In the light of this information, British Columbia's curb on anti-Semitic propagandists assumes increased importance. And the defeat of the anti-discrimination bill in Ontario is all the more to be condemned. Incidentally, while British Columbia seems alive to the importance of combatting anti-Semitism, is it modifying its attitude towards Japanese Canadians? That, surely, has been an outstanding example of racial discrimination.

Z.O.A. Opens "Liberation Week"

The Zionist Organization of America opened its "Liberation Week" throughout the country with emphasis on the enrollment of greater numbers of American Jews in the organization in support of the Jewish state in Palestine.

More than 750 branches of the organization held meetings and heard Zionist leaders call for widespread support among American Jews for the Jewish community in the Holy Land. Two hundred branches in New York held breakfast meetings highlighted by a broadcast message over Station WLIB from Dr. Emanuel Neumann, president of the Zionist organization.

More than 5,000 persons gathered on the steps of the Bronx County Courthouse and overflowed into Joyce Kilmer Park, opposite the courthouse, in a borough-wide people's rally sponsored by the Bronx division of the American Jewish Congress.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, president of the Congress, asserted that "on this Mother's Day, Mother Israel is calling her sons home," adding, that the "least that Christian civilization can do for us now in memory of our martyred dead is to say 'never again shall there be a Hitler or Mussolini.'"

Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, which will close its thirty-one-year career on June 30, announced the award of $100,000 to forty-seven Fund Fellows for 1948. This concludes the fund's program in which $2,000,000 has been expended on fellowships for promising Negroes and white Southerners. This year, twenty-nine Negroes, including twelve Easterners, and eighteen white Southerners receive awards averaging $2,000 each to enable them to carry out projects, including studies of human relations, painting, music, religion and African dancing.

BODY BUILDERS

A quart of milk has almost as much protein as half a pound of beef! It also contains valuable vitamins and minerals. So it's a smart idea to serve milk dishes on meatless days . . . and every day to see that your family gets its "health quota" — at least a quart of milk a day for growing children; a pint for adults.
